

Monday, May 9th, 2022, 10:00-11:30

FROM SENSATIONS TO SYMPTOMS: THE SOCIAL SHAPING OF FUNCTIONAL ILLNESS EXPERIENCE

Rebecca Seligman, PHD

Rebecca Seligman, PhD, is Associate Professor of Anthropology and Faculty Fellow at the Institute for Policy Research at Northwestern University. Dr. Seligman's current research investigates the embodiment of individual and social meanings in illness and healing. She is the Principal Investigator of the WT Grant Foundation study "Cultures of Care" which investigates Mexican American adolescent experiences of mental health care. She is also PI of the National Science Foundation funded study "From Sensations to Symptoms: The social shaping of functional illness experience." Her published works focus on cultural therapeutics, healing and self-transformation, mental health and religious practice, and the anthropology of psychotherapy.

Join via Zoom: <https://ucsd.zoom.us/j/97184539377?pwd=SzVLdXRoZUUwRVRhbFdxTnlxajZoUT09>